LinkedIn Post: Using Analytics to Improve Content Strategy

Platform:

LinkedIn

Content Type:

Professional Post

Objective:

Brand Awareness & Professional Networking

Purpose:

To share insights gained from optimizing the Yarn Charms digital marketing campaign while demonstrating practical application of data-driven marketing strategies and content optimization.

Content:

Not every lesson in digital marketing comes from a textbook.

Sometimes, it comes from running a small handmade business.

While working on the second phase of my digital marketing internship, I revisited the performance of my previous campaign for Yarn Charms instead of simply creating more content.

One insight stood out: educational posts consistently performed better than purely promotional ones.

Rather than guessing what might work next, I used those insights to reshape the content strategy. The focus shifted toward educating the audience, encouraging conversations, and building trust before promoting products.

It's a simple reminder that effective marketing isn't about posting more—it's about understanding what your audience values and making informed decisions based on real data.

Project 2 is giving me the opportunity to apply campaign optimization, content repurposing, paid marketing strategies, and analytics in a practical way while continuing to grow a real brand.

Every campaign teaches something new, and I'm looking forward to seeing how these improvements perform over the coming days.

What Managing Yarn Charms Taught Me About Digital Marketing

Article:

Managing a handmade business is often viewed as simply creating products and posting them online. However, working on Yarn Charms has shown me that successful digital marketing requires much more than regular posting.

Throughout this project, I learned the importance of understanding audience behavior before creating content. By reviewing performance insights from previous campaigns, it became clear that educational posts consistently generated stronger engagement than purely promotional content. This observation guided the content strategy for Project 2, where greater emphasis was placed on sharing crochet knowledge, answering frequently asked questions, and building trust with the audience.

Another important lesson was the value of consistency across platforms. Rather than creating completely different content for each platform, existing content was thoughtfully adapted for Instagram, Facebook, LinkedIn, and Reddit. This approach improved efficiency while maintaining a consistent brand identity.

The project also reinforced that meaningful engagement is built through conversations rather than constant selling. Interactive stories, polls, and community-focused content encouraged participation and strengthened relationships with followers.

Managing Yarn Charms has been a valuable opportunity to apply digital marketing concepts in a practical setting. It has strengthened my understanding of content strategy, campaign optimization, audience engagement, and data-driven decision-making—skills that will continue to support my growth as a digital marketer.

What type of handmade crochet content do you enjoy seeing the most?

Body:

Hi everyone!

I'm currently working on improving the content strategy for my small handmade crochet business, Yarn Charms. During the past few weeks, I've noticed that educational posts and behind-the-scenes content tend to receive more engagement than simple product promotions.

I'm curious to hear from fellow crochet lovers:

- What type of crochet content keeps you engaged?
- Do you prefer tutorials, FAQs, product showcases, or process videos?
- What makes you stop scrolling and interact with a crochet post?

I'd love to learn from your experiences and hear your suggestions.

Thanks in advance!
